Adding a black detail draws people's attention to that particular point, which exudes distinction and invites admiration from any design lover.

The comprehensive Alexia collection by Ramon Soler® presents the exclusive ALEXIA single-lever basin column, now in matt black, a finish that brings sobriety and elegance to the space, winning over the most exclusive bathrooms with its avant-garde design. The matt black tap alongside a freestanding basin forms a subtle ensemble following a monochrome line associated with a minimalist, majestic interior. The Alexia floor-standing basin column in matt black finish is an element of sophisticated, discreet and elegant lines that embellishes the basin area. Its design, with a volume of slender lines, runs from the floor to the basin and results in a design piece with great presence. It is distinguished by its advanced technology and technical quality, and by being a tap in the sights of architects, designers and interior designers who look in a tap for an element that offers more than a function: a differentiating value at the basin. The quality of its finishes is another of its strengths, with advanced techniques that offer maximum resistance to everyday use. The matt black finish is achieved with an electrostatic bath over galvanised metal, which gives it a durability in the salt spray test 10 times greater than chrome.

Black taps also bring a touch of the avant-garde to bathroom spaces, as they can be combined with other bathroom elements such as flooring or wall tiling in shades of grey, white and wood, creating a visual effect of cleanliness and absolute trendiness in the bathroom. This collection also has a design of soft lines that offer great comfort to the user. Ramon Soler® gives us a new collection, improved in form and technique, showing that with each design it surpasses itself a little more, making taps that radiate unrivalled elegance and style.
