ramonsoler's Poland bathroom project

A majestic bathroom with the straight-lined Kuatro taps by Ramon Soler®

Marble bathrooms show an elegance that envelops the whole setting, thanks to their greyish veining reminiscent of the designs of antiquity, known for their luxury and good taste. The combination of marble on the walls and wood on the floor creates a subtle warmth that gives the space a natural luxury. This bathroom with straight-lined taps from the KUATRO collection by Ramon Soler® is contemporary in style. The bathroom stands out for its white colour, the brightest in the colour palette, as it enhances the feeling of cleanliness and purity as well as having a greater effect with natural light. The brightest bathrooms can seem larger than they really are thanks to a good choice of light shades that accentuate the dimensions of the space.

ARCHITECTS AND DESIGNERS

The architects responsible for creating this wonderful space are Baranowsky Studio, a family business based in Warsaw (Poland) that creates projects of great beauty and the highest quality. The interior design studio behind the bathroom design is SCENA Interior design, founded in November 2019 by Paulina Boruch and Wojciech Uriasz. Their style is elegant and delicate, as well as highly original and always at the cutting edge. Their projects combine subtle colours such as greens or pastel pinks with browns.

SHOWER AREA

The shower area is subtly unified with the bathtub area, with the shower camouflaged behind the bathtub. On each side of the screen there is a space from which it can be accessed, although the usual access is on the left side, as there is more room to move. On the right side of the shower area there are some decorative and functional elements, such as a touch of greenery that gives the setting a personal, warm feel, and a small table on which to leave personal hygiene products, adding functionality to the space. Light plays a very important role, as it highlights this section. At each end of the wall there is a vertical strip of continuous light that makes the shower stand out in a masterful way. The shower features the elegant Termo KUATRO concealed thermostatic tap, as well as a square-format shower head installed in the ceiling that gives a pleasant rain effect on the body. Every detail has been considered, which is why, for greater comfort, the bathroom also has a hand shower that gives the user greater reach.

BATHTUB AREA

To one side is the spectacular freestanding bathtub on a marble-clad step, reminiscent of a pedestal on which to display a masterpiece. The bathroom has a glossy finish that creates a mirror effect, reflecting the light of the room, which in turn enhances the importance of the central element, the bathtub. The bathtub is positioned right in front of the shower, which, thanks to its screen, creates a shining effect together with the ceiling lights, becoming an optical effect that plays with the dimensions of the bathroom and makes you think the room continues beyond the cladding. Without doubt, the most remarkable element that completes the exclusive design is the Ramon Soler® taps. The KUATRO bathtub tap has a tall spout that starts at the floor and rises to the height needed to use the bathtub comfortably and elegantly. It is an element that complements the bathtub perfectly, adding the elegant look that makes the interior an exceptional place. Its curved shape at the top is intended for greater comfort, giving the right distance for the user to enjoy their relaxing moment of the day more. The interior of the room unites functionality with design, the two most important concepts when creating a space.

DOUBLE BASIN

In the Poland bathroom there is a double basin arrangement that allows two people to use it at the same time. These basins are right up to date thanks to their great functionality, since having space and storage at a basin is essential. The basins follow the same contour as the freestanding bathtub, creating a symmetry in the design to achieve overall harmony. They include the spectacular tall-spout KUATRO tap, which is ideal for bowl-shaped basins by Ramon Soler®, giving a distinctive touch to this generously sized area.

TAPS

Taps have become major protagonists of the bathroom thanks to their attractive designs that help personalise the room. A good example is the new KUATRO series by Ramon Soler®, characterised by its impeccable design of right angles that fit perfectly into any bathroom seeking quality. Its contemporary design and elegant presence add a touch of extra quality to the bathroom that fascinates everyone who enters it. This spectacular square-format tap has a tall spout to give the user greater comfort in daily use.

KUATRO is an exclusive collection for design lovers and offers a complete range, among which a concealed tap in the shower area with a large shower head stands out. The bathroom is also equipped with a floor-standing tap for the freestanding bathtub in a metallic colour with a glossy finish that gives the space a majestic feel. The taps in the basin area are two identical taps from the KUATRO series with a square format of straight lines, also present in the unit itself, creating a combination worthy of great design. The Poland bathroom is a clear example of the distinction provided by the KUATRO taps by Ramon Soler®, which give the interior unrivalled sophistication.
